More about the conference:

We embark on this 2020 conference with eyes toward the future. As the field of Work-Life evolves and the landscape of higher education shifts, what opportunities lie ahead? What will our university workplaces look like in 2040 and beyond? How can Work-Life continue to inform and support the future as a trusted partner?

Noted author and executive coach Amy Jen Su will provide a conference keynote on how COVID-19 has brought the “human experience” to the forefront of leadership and how work-life practitioners can continue to influence and engage leaders going forward. The program will also include discussions on mental health, the future of well-being across higher education, and opportunities for networking. Questions? Email lesley.lundeen@northwestern.edu.
